HATS THAT HELP

Hatsgiving is a non-profit project that relies on donations and volunteers to continue growing and reaching pediatric cancer patients around the country.

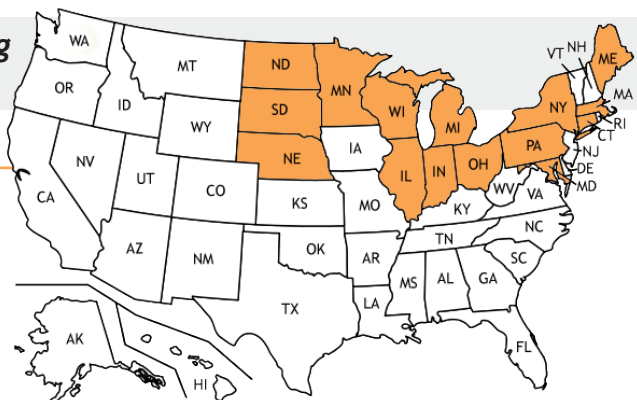

How to help

Just bring a new winter hat, sizes newborn to adult (store-bought or handmade) to any Hatsgiving collection site. Visit our website or speak to your local Hatsgiving representative for details on location and dates.

Where the hats go

All of the hats collected will be distributed to cancer patients at regional pediatric cancer treatment centers. Since 2013, Hatsgiving has distributed 8,584 hats to 16 pediatric cancer treatment centers in 15 different states.

The Story of Hatsgiving

The concept for this project was developed in 2012 by Jeremy Wernick, who had just turned 8 years old. That was the second year he shaved his head to raise money and awareness for childhood cancer research. This got him thinking about kids who lose their hair during the colder months due to chemotherapy treatments, so he created Hatsgiving. The first official collection was held in 2013. Each year, Hatsgiving continues to grow thanks to all of the wonderful, warm hats that are so graciously donated.
